

EURONAVAL launches the SEAnnovation 2022 call for applications

Paris, 30th March 2022

On Wednesday 30th March, Euronaval 2022, the world's largest naval defence exhibition, which will be held in Paris Le-Bourget from 18th to 21st October 2022, is launching its call for applications for SEAnnovation, the space dedicated to startups and technologies of the future, in partnership with EOLOS

SEAnnovation, the EURONAVAL exhibition's business incubator

Created in 2018, SEAnnovation is at the heart of the exhibition and aims to host and promote around thirty French and foreign startups in a dedicated space animated by round tables, keynotes and pitches over the four days.

All startups involved in technological innovation in the naval defence or dual-use sector, including vehicles of the future, predictive maintenance, connectivity, cyber defence or artificial intelligence for navies, are invited to apply.

The aim is to cover all areas of naval defence expertise. Once the call for applications has closed, at the end of May, all the applications will be examined by the Euronaval board and a maximum of 36 startups will be selected to exhibit at the exhibition under privileged conditions.

Enter into an ecosystem dedicated to innovation

For the selected startups, this is a unique opportunity to get to know the naval industry's prime contractors, to meet naval officers and decision-makers from all over the world.

The SEAnnovation space, strategically located near the Ministry of Defence and GICAN stands, allows startups to take advantage of the exhibition's international visibility to develop their reputation.

SEAnnovation was one of the great successes of EURONAVAL 2018. The French President, Emmanuel Macron, spent a long time at SEAnnovation to exchange with the startups during his visit to the exhibition.
