Raise the Anchor Sail in Safety and Trust with ASELSAN

ASELSAN shows what latest technology can bring to maritime and naval defense industry at EURONAVAL 2022 taking place from October 18 – 21 at Le Bourget, Paris. The company is excited to meet and interact once more with sector professionals and to expand its international partnerships during the show.

Rapid developing and emerging threats in the naval warfare requires efficient, agile and adaptive technologies in this area. With constantly refreshing technologies and up-to-date capacities, ASELSAN aims to fill the existing gaps in naval capability with its continued focus in this domain.

“We address threats and challenges harming people and planet as a matter of priority. To better perform our mission of safeguarding stability and strength, we make ourselves responsible for the safety of people at sea. We are cognizant of the fact that we undertake a role as an anchor with our advanced naval technologies to support safety and trust in each moment at sea.” said Prof. Dr. Haluk GÖRGÜN, Chairman, President and CEO.

Having accumulated its knowledge throughout an half century journey of technological development, ASELSAN looks well into the future by contributing to the welfare of people with its security enhancing solutions. There is certainly a need for greater focus on building a strong learning culture in every aspect. Strong collaboration with the academia and the industry itself enable the company to develop in economic, social and technical issues. ASELSAN sees continuous learning not only as a process, but also as an attitude. The company’s business environment is based on human centered innovation and well-built partnerships. Sustainable collaborations do not only ensure efficiency and stability, they also direct to innovation and creativity.

Being again this year within the “Top 50” in the Defense News Top 100 List is an indicator of what the company will bring to fruition in the near future. With the inspiration of its users in 80 different countries, ASELSAN sets in the center of its direction of travel people and planet. The company strives for a future that fits both human and business needs by adding value to all stakeholders and partners in a variety of defense.

ASELSAN’s team shares the excitement to present a comprehensive exhibit of advanced naval solutions and looks forward to welcoming you at Booth B37 during EURONAVAL. This unique event will be an opportunity to engage again and to explore potential cooperation areas. So, raise the anchor and sail in safety and trust.
